Don't waste time in poking lather up his nostrils or in his mouth.

Keep your combs and brushes piously Do not compel your customer to talk whether he wants to or not.

Always be pleasant and polite; it costs nothing, yet it pays. Regular and thorough rinsing out of the soap-cup and brush. When jerking a gentleman's head around,

When you come to dressing the head do it tenderly, and not like a Sioux Indian taking a scalp.

A FORCIBLE ILLUSTRATION.-In Cox's Court there was a charge of assault against that old offender and police favorite, "John Doe," and Mr. Dickson, the attorney, was examining a witness. Dickson-How hard did he shake the man when he grabbed him?

Witness-I don't know. Pretty hard. Dickson-What do you call "pretty Witness-Well, it was pretty hard; that's all I can say. Dickson-Come, now, you surely have sense enough to let the Court know what you call "pretty hard." Witness-I guess I can show the Court. It was like this.

Here the witness rose from his seat, and, springing upon the astonished attorney, grabbed him by the collar, and, with strong, impulsive jerk, landed him on the floor. Then he gathered him up and flopped him across a chair-then he began to bang him over the floor, jam him up against the wall and batter him around over the benches. "Hold on-I understand!" shouted the lawyer. "This is how he fetched him," retorted the witness, giving him another lift. "Won't the Court rule out his answer? I object," said Mr. Dickson, catching his MASSACHUSETTS AND VIRGINIA GIRLS .-Women of Boston, Springfield, Hartford, and the cities and villages of New England in general, are like spirits for willowly slenderness of form and refined softness of expression. Having the delicate fragility of blossoms, they begin to fade at twenty-five. But while they last they are beautiful, after an angelic pattern that is found nowhere else on earth. And when they happen to have gray eyes, with the dash of enthusiasm and spirit that pertains to such, they gossip have gray eyes, with the dash of enthusiasm and spirit that pertains to such, they gossip of literature and art with a fascinating liveliness and piquancy that are rare among women elsewhere. Margaret Fuller—the Coleridge of her sex—was such a woman, a typical New England girl, of the grayeyed, demi-blonde style. I have met many who were like her, although never one who equalled her in Platonic monologue. It is only in Virginia that the correlative of the New England girl occurs as the prevalent type, with a fuller and more voluptuous form, but the same delicate moulding of the extremities, the pink-nails and finger-tips, and the same pink-tinted palm. The predominance of blondes over brunettes is in proportion of four to three; the semi, with gray eyes, forming about one eighth of the whole. - Appleton's Journal for October.

While demolishing a part of the mediæval fortifications at Ratisbon (Regensburg), Bavaria, a few weeks ago, the workmen un-covered the southwest corner of the wall which encircled the old Roman city of Reginum, and extended thence to Colonia Agrippini, the modern Cologne. Two of the massive stones were sculptured, the one with the figure of an imperator or chieftain, with his sword at his side, about two thirds the size of life, dictating to a secretary, who is in a sitting posture; the figure is extremely well-preserved, and the or handso book which rests upon his knees indicates that the subject-matter related to some mili-tary movements. The other stone exhibits SCHOOL- AND TEXT-BOOKS, a horse, which an attendant is holding by the bridle. Capitals of pillars and hewn stones were found near by, supposed to be remains of the Carlovingian Palace, which once stood on the site.

PECULIAR DISTRIBUTION OF NEGRO POPU-At least four-fifths of the negroes are located among the streams and rivers, with the large majority of the whites back of these on the prairies and piney wood country. In certain parts of Concordia—the Third Ward, for instance—the negroes are more than fifty to one in the closely-settled country. On the other hand, in the Fifth Ward of Grant parish, the Eighth Ward of Natchitoches, Tammany not a single negro—man, woman, or child—has ever resided. It is truly white

And I never read without my plasses,
And that is how my wisdom passes.

KNEW WHAT HE WAS TALKING ABOUT. -A politician offered to bet fifty dollars that he could name two cities—one of over 5,000 inhabitants and the other over 75,000-neither of which would cast a vote for either Hayes or Wheeler. Upon being requested to name them, he mentioned Washington city and Georgetown. Both are in the District of Columbia, where they do not vote for presidential candidates.—St. Louis Journal.
